Residents want strict abortion, drug laws

A recent poll has indicated that most East Bostonians don't want the laws relaxed in two controversial areas, abortions and drugs. The poll was taken last month by Rep. Mimie B. Pitaro.

He found that his constituents opposed Gov. Sargent's tax plan. But they favored state aid to parochial schools, and using highway fund money for mass transportation. The group sampled also favored reducing the size of the House.

On drugs, the sample group was opposed both to relaxing laws on possession of marijuana and legalizing marijuana.

Out of the 246 persons responding, the greatest number of "yes" votes (200) were for public aid to parochial schools. The most "no" votes were against relaxation of laws on possession of narcotics.

Questionnaires were sent from Pitaro's office on Mar. 5 to 2000 persons from the Ward 1 voting lists. By the middle of March, 246, or 12.5 per cent of those surveyed, had replied. A summary of the survey results appears on page 10.

City council probes elderly housing delay

by Dorothy Brickman

The City Council is looking into the delay in funding for the Maverick Square elderly housing project.

In a hearing Wednesday, councillors asked officials of the Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) why the 300-unit project has been held up.

Councillor Fred Langone called for the hearing. He said in an interview later that he read about the problem in the Community News.

Langone asked BRA official James Drought if the federal funding for the project had been approved in writing.

Drought said that he only had approval by word of mouth.

"I don't think they (the BRA) are telling the people the whole truth," he said. "I was led to believe that there was no problem in getting the funds. Now we discover six months later that the funds are not forthcoming."

"This is misleading to the people of East Boston. And we still don't have anything in writing."

When asked what action the council planned to take next, Langone replied, "I'm going to put an order in the council that we ask our Congressional delegation in Washington to intercede with the Bureau of the Budget and acquire these funds."

ABC board denies function hall license

The state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission has refused to issue a liquor license to the owners of a function hall on Trenton Street.

The ruling by the ABC board, announced March 19, overturned a decision in January by the City of Boston licensing board. A group of about 25 residents voiced opposition at a city hearing, but the Boston board granted the license.

In its written decision, the state board stressed that granting the license would be contrary to the law prohibiting licensed establishments within 500 feet of churches. The applicants had argued for an exemption, pointing out that the building was licensed once in the past.

The hall is within 500 feet of St. John's Episcopal Church.

The state board also cited the influence of the Fels Research Institute, in nearby Cambridge, stating that granting the license would "denies that there was no problem in getting the funds. Now we discover six months later that the funds are not forthcoming."

"This is misleading to the people of East Boston. And we still don't have anything in writing."

When asked what action the council planned to take next, Langone replied, "I'm going to put an order in the council that we ask our Congressional delegation in Washington to intercede with the Bureau of the Budget and acquire these funds."

Funds on, then off

At one point Wednesday, it appeared as if funding for the project was coming soon.

BRA official Drought told the Community News on that day that $13 million had been released by Washington for subsidized housing projects in New England. Drought said he received this information two weeks ago.

But later Wednesday Drought said the $13 million wasn't coming and there was no indication when it was.

Document noise damage

Rep. Serra explained that there were documented medical studies presented at the American Association for the Advancement of Science's annual meeting held in Boston last year that showed violent noise such as that from jet planes has permanently damaging effects on unborn babies.

Doctor Sontag, who is the director of the Fels Research Institute in Ohio, also stated, Rep. Serra related, that too much noise has been shown to affect the physical and psychological health of nearby residents, as well as those who live near other international airports.

In seeking support for his bill, Rep. Serra called his colleagues' attention to the very real dangers to public health and welfare that the airport operations can and do cause.
CDC board elected Thursday

The East Boston Neighborhood Council membership has elected its eight representatives to the board of directors of the East Boston Community Development Corporation (CDC).

The voting took place at the Sacred Heart Church Hall Wednesday night, with 137 persons casting ballots.

Norma Barbarisi (180 Walden Ave.), Rev. John Hinkley (Sacred Heart Church), Patrick Moscaritolo (549 Bennington St.), and Fred Salvucci (former manager of the East Boston Little City Hall, living in Brighton) were elected to two-year terms.

Anthony Cecere (1305 Saratoga St.), Anna DeFronzo (12 Lasson Court), Evelyn Morsa (62 Putnam St.), and Ken Tacelli (41 Trenton St.) will serve one-year terms.

The 15-member CDC board will also include five representatives from the APAC (Area Planning Action Council), one from the East Boston Chamber of Commerce, and one from the Brandywine Tenants Council.

Impact, a federally-funded economic development program overseen by the Neighborhood Council, has applied for a $1.3 million grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) for use by the CDC. A proposal, recently submitted to OEO by Impact, calls for spending the funds on housing rehabilitation, waterfront development, elderly housing, and a series of smaller projects.

The CDC is in the process of being incorporated.

Border Street soon to be paved

The rough cobblestones of Border Street will be paved over with asphalt sometime soon.

Sources in the mayor's office said this week a contract has been awarded for repaving the street. The beginning of the work has been delayed because of the proposed First Realty apartment project on Border Street.

First Realty met with city officials recently to talk over the street work. The company agreed to find out if any gas mains in the street would have to be replaced before the work started.

The city agreed not to pave the part of the street directly in front of the First Realty property until the construction is completed.

New CDC head hopes people will control wealth

by Eileen Kuzeski

A director has been picked for the multi-million dollar Community Development Corporation (CDC) that is getting underway here. Del Goetz, a business "development" expert from San Francisco, began work two weeks ago in the IMPACT office on Meridian Street.

The East Boston Neighborhood Council chose her from among 34 candidates for the $20,000 job. The Council is overseeing the CDC, which is expected to bring into East Boston $1.9 million in federal and local funds, for new business ventures.

In an interview with the Community News, Del stressed the need for putting more of the "wealth" of East Boston under the control of its people. She also thinks the Italian culture of the community should be preserved.

"Wealth in the land"

Del said the CDC can help East Boston survive and grow, since it can "create wealth for the people."

She feels that in this society power lies in wealth, and communities can control their destinies only when they control the wealth inside them. "If the community is in control, others from outside cannot steal it as they have in the past," she said.

In East Boston, Del feels the wealth lies in the land, so the CDC should concentrate on waterfront development and housing.

East Boston differs from other communities in this respect, Del pointed out. In other places more emphasis has been placed on industry and jobs, whereas in East Boston the interest is in creating a better living environment.

Trend from industry to services

Del said that the money made through the CDC will be given back to the community for services such as health aid and scholarships.

She explained further that in building up the economy of the community, the CDC hopes to train people in managing and owning businesses. She feels this is desirable because the movement in East Boston is from an industrial economy to a retail and service one, from blue collar to white collar.

The CDC will conduct training programs as part of its projects. Del stressed that she hopes her role would be one of educator as well as CDC field worker. She wishes to gain certain skills in management by watching and helping her work on development projects.

Del's comments about co-operation among agencies in East Boston, Del stated emphatically that she hopes it will be there.

"If we don't hang together, they will hang us all," she said.

Accepts checks by community

She feels that this co-operation is insured somewhat by the overlapping of the Neighborhood Council with other groups. Del explained that she is powerless without the Neighborhood Council. "I need their approval for everything I want to do."

 Asked about her predictions for the CDC, Del said, "I'm willing to have the community measure my effectiveness. If they don't like what I'm doing, I'll leave."

Italian "values" worth preserving

Besides her professional and educational background, Del brings with her a knowledge and understanding of Italian communities. She grew up in an Italian community in Cleveland.

She feels that Italian-Americans have much to learn from the values of such communities, and that these values are certainly worth preserving. This belief underlies her interest in developing East Boston, she said.

She pointed out that the concept of the extended family in Italian, black, and Spanish American communities is a model for a healthier society. Italian communities have a lower divorce rate, lower crime rate and in general, less of the "chronic diseases of civilization" than the rest of society, according to Del.

"Skills have to come from outside"

Asked to comment on her position as an "outsider" to East Boston and the fact that she was chosen over two East Boston residents who applied for the job, Del announced that "the professional skills needed to develop the potential of East Boston have to come from the outside at this point."

APAC Board nominations opened

Are you interested in sitting on the board of directors of the Area Planning Action Council (APAC), or do you know someone who is? Nominations for candidacy in the APAC community-wide election opened yesterday. Nomination petitions may be picked up at the APAC office, 21 Meridian Street, any weekday between 9 and 5.

The election is scheduled for May 11, and the nominations will close on April 30.

Eleven seats are vacant on the board of directors of this federally-funded service agency. The board has 22 members. One of the seats represents the Orient Heights area, four represent Eagle Hill, two represent the Maverick area, one represents Jeffries Point, and three are at-large.

All candidates for seats in particular areas must have low incomes, but this is not a qualification for the at-large seats.

To be eligible for candidacy, one must be over 18 years of age and a resident of East Boston for at least six months. Fifteen signatures are required on the nominations petition. They must be signatures of people eligible to vote in the area from which the candidate is running.

The criteria for voters in the same as the candidates.

Musical, "Sound of Music"

May ease parochial school crisis

Planning office explains ‘East Boston Collaborative’

by Marie Di Flumeri

Last week more parents were visited by Fr. Michael Groden to discuss partial consolidation of East Boston parochial schools.

Fr. Groden, director of the Archdiocesan Planning Office for Urban Affairs, explained a little further the reasons prompting the formation of the East Boston Collaborative.

This group consists of major superiors, clergy and faculty of all six parishes in East Boston. They are presenting their program to all parents of parochial school children for their approval.

One thing that is taking a toll on parochial schools, Fr. Groden said, is a decline of convent entrants. This forces the schools to hire lay teachers, which in turn has a bearing on tuition increases.

Some parents feel that the tuition increase and the fear of parochial schools closing have caused many families to take their children out and send them to public schools.

A smaller classroom financially burdens the remaining families and now puts the school "in crisis."

Nuns now able to choose school

As a possible solution, the Planning Office and the East Boston Collaborative have agreed there should be a "coming together" of all five religious orders and lay faculty. Up until now, the teaching structure of Catholic schools has been such that five different religious orders work in the community, one to each school, by order of the Archbishop.

With the passing of a new law, the teaching sister will now choose the community and school in which she wishes to teach. According to Fr. Groden, East Boston will be a select community in attracting these nuns, because of this experimental "Collaborative" program, which will be a model for other communities to follow.

The Planning Office for Urban Affairs is also offering a Masters Program in Education at the Newton Sacred Heart College to any religious or lay teacher interested during the summer months. The course would normally cost $2100 per person, but through the Planning Office, a grant from the Archdiocesan funds of $10,000 will reduce the cost to $200 for each teacher or religious.

Fr. Groden has told the parents of both Sacred Heart and St. Lazarus that their school is not closing. The high tuition of both schools, $120 and $115 per year respectively, has been a major concern of parents. It was explained by Fr. Groden that a finance committee will soon be established, involving parents, to work out the financial problems of all six schools.

One suggestion from a Sacred Heart parent was to bring some Boston College boys into the program. This met with great approval from the parents.
On parochial schools: we goofed

The Community News has probably contributed a little to the problems of parochial schools by some confused stories.

In the last issue, the News ran a story about an Archdiocesan plan to close one school here.

The headline read, "Archdiocesan planners proposing closing one school here." But the story didn't say that.

Fr. Michael Groden of the Archdiocesan Planning Office has said that one school may close here, but he did not propose it. If that school closes, it will be the school's own decision, Fr. Groden said.

In February, Community News reporter Marie Di Flumeri interviewed pastors of each of East Boston's six parochial schools. When the story was printed, some of the type got mixed up so that statements from some pastors were included with others.

A corrected version of the statement appears below:

Local Schools' Reaction

The following are comments from the pastors of East Boston parishes.

Most Holy Redeemer - Rev. Msgr. Lazarus - Rev. Guido Caverzan

"Yes, my school is in crisis, but I will not ask permission to close until I explore every effort to further Catholic education. Increasing the tuition will only put a heavier burden on those who already pay it.

"Amalgamation is one way out, and no overnight decision will be made, however I will give ample notice of closing, when it becomes necessary. The sisters in my school are so dedicated they will teach without the pay increase that has been recently allotted."

"The final decision will be made by the people."

St. Lazarus - Rev. Guido Caverzan

"My school is in crisis. I have lost $4,000 on the whole. We do not want to close now, but I am looking for ways to raise funds."

"My parishioners will decide the fate of the school, and as of now they are against consolidation and the nuns here (Sisters of St. Joseph) are not in favor of it.

"The people will accept it only when every avenue to keep the school open is exhausted. We will open in September."

Contributed a little to the problems a story about an Archdiocesan plan to close one school here.

We have not asked permission to close but I'm a little fearful of saying we'll definitely open in September. I hope I'm wrong, but I must be honest.

"I'm not sure how long we'll be allowed to run on a deficit, but I hope that at our Reunited, the Annual Reunited, bingo and the bazaars will keep us in the black. I know I'm a pessimist, but I'm just learning how to run a school and I want to keep it out of the red.

"If the school opens in September, the tuition will definitely be doubled. I would also like to say that even if I ask to close the school, the Chancery has the last word and they may demand that I stay open. We'll try everything first. I want to stay open."

No more 'No children'

An East Boston woman, Mary Southern, would like to see an end to landlords saying, "No children."

Mrs. Southern, a mother of six children, is pushing a petition drive to support a bill in the Legislature to end discrimination against apartment dwellers with children.

The bill, House 2553, would prohibit discrimination in all but emergency situations.

Mrs. Southern, originally from Oklahoma, has tales to tell about the trouble she has had finding housing.

Last October, she and some of her children were living on Revere Beach.

"And that isn't easy...I can tell you," she remarks.

She says she looks at an average of eight apartments she can afford for every one that will accept children.

"You call up and the first thing they ask is have you got kids," says Mrs. Southern.

She said she is being evicted from her apartment on London Street.

"The landlord there even wants to direct traffic in and out of the house. She tells me when to put the kids to bed. When we were first there it was like living in a cemetery, we had to be so quiet.

"Where are kids supposed to live?"

Our Lady of Mt. Carmel - Rev. Richard Passeri, O.P.M., pastor:

"As of January 31, Mt. Carmel was running $20 in the black. The budget for February foresees a $1000 deficit mainly because heating will absorb most of the profits.

"We have not asked permission to close but I'm a little fearful of saying we'll definitely open in September. I hope I'm wrong, but I must be honest.

"I'm not sure how long we'll be allowed to run on a deficit, but I hope that at our Reunited, the Annual Reunited, bingo and the bazaars will keep us in the black. I know I'm a pessimist, but I'm just learning how to run a school and I want to keep it out of the red.

"If the school opens in September, the tuition will definitely be doubled. I would also like to say that even if I ask to close the school, the Chancery has the last word and they may demand that I stay open. We'll try everything first. I want to stay open."

SST shot down in D.C. and at State House

A 51 to 46 vote in the U.S. Senate last week killed all further federal funding of the supersonic transport plane (SST).

Senators Edward Kennedy and Edward Brooke of Massachusetts voted against the project that has already cost the government $461 million.

The Transportation Department has to file a bill to stop all work on the project. The Washington Post reported last Friday that the bill would ask for $275 million to close the project out.

The head of the Supersonic Transport Committee, representing 26 airlines, said Friday some U.S. airlines are considering buying the Russian SST.

The Massachusetts Legislature has voiced its approval of banning landings of supersonic transport planes (SSTs) in the state.

On Tuesday, the Senate voted 27 to 6 to ban the planes at Logan Airport, and the House voted 119 to 109 for a bill to ban the craft anywhere in the state.

The three East Boston legislators had all supported the bills.

Transportation Committee chairman Rep. Raymond Rourke of Lowell fought hard to save the SST.

When the bill was reported out of Rourke's committee, the vote was initially 10 to 9 in favor of it.

But Rourke stayed an uncommitted member of the committee, and the bill was reported out with a 10 to 10 vote. A tie vote meant an adverse report.

The House vote Monday overrode this adverse report.

Anti-war program April 15

People take Logan Airport by eminent domain

On March 32, happy crowds of East Bostonians took over Logan Airport.

At 3:02 in the early morning, the last plane took off from the airport. An estimated 34,000 residents slept through the rest of the night, including the 2000 or so residents used to waking up every half hour.

Crowds began to gather soon after dawn on the vast expanse of land that was Logan Airport. Runway 4-22 was quickly converted to a go-cart track. Some children flew kites in the Bird Island Flats area while others marked out baseball diamonds.

Earlier in the week, 2000 residents had jammed City Hall to demand that the city take Logan by eminent domain. After counting the crowd, city councillors held a secret parley and then announced their verdict: the Port Authority had to move out.

An eviction notice was served Tuesday at the Port Authority's Atlantic Avenue offices.

Port Authority director King Edward shown here in a February 23rd news conference describing plans for expansion of Logan Airport.

Gov. Sargent's limousine waited outside Edward's office to transport his personal effects to the State House basement, where Edward has been given a job as Chief Resident Sanitary Engineer.

Meanwhile, in East Boston, civic leaders were mapping out plans for a 2000-unit elderly housing complex in the vicinity of runway 15-33.

A team of workmen was busy all week preparing the former Wood Island Park land for replanting.

The Eastern terminal was rapidly converted to an antique aircraft museum. A prototype of the SST was moved in as the first exhibit.

Investors panic

On Wall Street, investors dashed around the floor of the stock exchange trying to dump Port Authority bonds. Some of Massachusetts' leading politicians and financiers were seen weeping in front of ticker machines at State Street investment offices.

A monumental traffic jam occurred Tuesday in the tunnel when dump trucks carrying fill were diverted from Bird Island Flats. At one point 300 trucks from as far away as New Hampshire were backed up into Dock Square in Boston.

The contractor, George DePerini, ordered the trucks to dump the fill in the front yard of the State House.

"When you make a contract with a state agency, you have to fulfill it," said DePerini. "We never fail to deliver."

News staff gives April Fools awards

The East Boston Community News proudly announces its first annual April Fools awards.

After only minutes of deliberation, the News staff chose the three finalists. They are (in alphabetical order) First Realty Corporation, the Massachusetts Port Authority, and George Murphy of the East Boston Times.

Third place went to George Murphy, who lives in Peabody, for warning that too many outsiders meddle in East Boston's affairs. Murphy's award is a lifetime subscription to the East Boston Community News.

Second place went to First Realty Corporation for threatening to construct a 10-story foundation at the northern end of Border Street, if negotiations with community groups prove fruitless.

First Realty was awarded a 10-acre site in West Roxbury.

Leading the field of contestants by a safety zone was the Massachusetts Port Authority. The MPA was tagged as 1971's biggest April Fool for:

1) buying homes in response to noise complaints;
2) planning another runway and supporting the SST plane as noise abatement measures.

The MPA's award is a monumental traffic jam on theTU-144, the Russian-built SST.

Foolish Briefs

What's that you said?

School Committee Chairman Paul Tierney announced yesterday that all East Boston students entering seventh grade in both public and parochial schools will be required to take sign language courses beginning in the Fall semester of 1971.

Many teachers have been complaining that they cannot hear their students' answers while planes take off and land at Logan Airport. Chairman Tierney said, "Since we can't make Logan go away, we have to resort to these drastic measures to assure uninterrupted continuation of the educational process in the effected East Boston schools."

Kings retiring?

Rumor has it that Edward King, executive director of the MPA, has filed an application with the Boston Housing Authority for a studio apartment in the Maverick Square Elderly Housing Project, expected to be completed by 1992.

Generosity

We hear the East Boston Times is thinking about taking a $50 annual membership in the Community News.
In response to a suggestion made at the first open meeting of the News, this paper will present an Inquiring Reporter column periodically. We will visit various sections of East Boston and interview people of different ages and backgrounds.

Although the opinions stated in this column may not reflect a cross section of East Boston views, we do pledge to report the differing opinions that we receive.

The questions may concern individual, local, national or international topics.

In order for this column to be of greatest interest to you, we ask that you suggest the questions for the Inquiring Reporter's interviews. If your suggestion is used, you will be noted as our contributor.

Inquiring Reporter
Carol Orr, she fell in love with her job - a profile

by Dom Amara

"Basically, what I have hoped to do all my life is to teach the young that they have two feet of their own," says Carol Orr.

"Once they realize that, it's our job to take our hands off their shoulders and let them find their own way. It's something parents often fail to realize."

Miss Orr is the Director of the Trinity Neighborhood House on Meridian Street in East Boston. Arriving in East Boston in 1931, after only one year at Boston University, she took a job in social work as a means of financing her education. An English language and literature major, she confesses that her initial goal was to become a teacher.

As fate would have it, she "fell in love with her job" and worked full time, continuing her formal education on a part time basis. She finally received her Bachelor's degree in 1950, and has completed graduate studies in Social Work at Simmons College.

Miss Orr considers herself somewhat of a "Yankee from way back," she explained, "and it becomes a career and it becomes your life."

"Many people come here to work in creating some of it. They realize that, it's our duty to teach the young that they have two feet of their own," she said. "But, I've seen the level of skills rise and the percentage going to college.

"East Boston has always been a warm neighborhood. But, the people are no longer being pushed around by School Committees and Port Authorities and what have you. It means things like a community paper, APAC, IMPACT and it means people acting and not a bunch of eggheads telling people what to do."

She judges that the past five years have shown the greatest push for change in East Boston. "There's a good deal of stirring up going on," she said, "and I hope it continues."

The young people of the community hold a special place in her heart. "I can't wait for the young to take over. I think they'll do a great job. Edith DeAngelis (a professor at Boston State College and community leader) is an example. She's been one of the brightest jewels that came out of this house. Rudy Fobert (Superintendent of a Public School in Lexington) is also a product of this house."

Nature lover, conservationist

Work aside, Miss Orr considers herself a dog lover (she has two cocker spaniels whom she calls her "babies"), a "fairly good" amateur nature photographer, arts and craftsman, and a birdwatcher, probably in that order.

By her own admission she's a "fanatic on conservation." Hardly one to nince words, she adds, "I was involved with conservation long before most people knew what the word meant."

Innocently I asked what, if anything, she had done relative to conservation. I should bite my tongue.

Justifiably blunt, she replied, "I think that in founding a camp, teaching conservation to young people, lecturing, and chopping my way through thousands of acres is something." She is also an active member of the Audubon Society, the Sierra Club, and the National Wildlife Federation.

Carol agrees that she gets involved in anything that involves the community. She's served on the Board of Directors of the Big Sister Association and the Girl Scouts of America for about 40 years. She has received service awards from the Girl Scouts, the National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Houses and Sargent College, to mention a few.

On April 19, Miss Orr will celebrate her 60th birthday. Is she slowing the pace? "My staff doesn't think so but I don't chop down as many trees as I used to, yet I sure poke needles in enough people to get them to do it." East Boston has become part of Carol Orr now. To her it's "a place to live, to preserve, and to make better."

Committee hears bills to regulate MPA
by Patrick B. Moscaritolo

The Joint Committee on Transportation held hearings last Thursday morning on a number of bills filed by Senator Umana and Representatives Serra and Pitari relating to noise abatement procedures, night-time curfews at Logan Airport, and the purchasing of land by the M.P.A.

Senator Mario Umana made an eloquent plea to his fellow legislators for favorable action on the series of bills restricting Logan Airport operations. During the course of his testimony, the chairman of the transportation committee, Representative Live Rosek, became involved in a heated exchange with Senator Umana regarding the power of the Commonwealth to regulate the Massachusetts Port Authority.

Rep. Rourke felt regulation of airport operations was a federal matter, and should be left to the Congress. Senator Umana argued that the Commonwealth, under its "police powers," can and has the obligation to regulate Logan Airport operations.

The group is scheduled to meet again tonight, (April 2).

The Speaker also spoke of the institution of a legislative post-audit committee to serve as a watchdog over our state agencies and public authorities.

Mt. Carmel non sarebbero assegnati ad altre scuole ma che piuttosto altri studenti sarebbero assegnati a Mt. Carmel.

"Questa scuola non verrà chiusa ad aver un futuro" ha aggiunto: "Ha molte possibilità ed ha genitori che sono interessati e si impegnano con grande dedizione."

Durante un periodo di domande e risposte, i genitori sorvegliavano al lato destro circa le voci di un trasferimento delle scuole in qualche altra scuola. Fr. Groden ha chiarito che la proporzione degli insegnanti sia religiosi che regolari rimarrebbe la stessa.

Dopo l'incontro varie domande sono state rivolte ai genitori ed agli insegnanti. Era molto chiaro che i genitori erano o confusi su questo soggetto o non era affatto loro interessante. La continua gradiente mentre gli insegnanti davano l'impressione d'essere completamente in favore di questa proposta che a loro parere era per gli interessi migliori dell'istruzione delle scuole parrocchiali di East Boston.

A nessuno è permesso di entrare in questo centro ricreativo salsiccia senza prima aver firmato la seguente dichiarazione: "Non ho in mio possesso alcuna droga, preparato chimico, medicina o qualsiasi apparato del genere. In questo momento non sono affetto dall'influenza della droga o dell'alcol." Un'analisi dell'urina è condotta per se sospetta che un individuo sia sotto l'influenza della droga.

A differenza del programma Turn Off che provvede il metodo di cura con il "Methadone" per coloro che stanno gradualmente abbandonando l'uso degli stupefacenti, il Consiglio di Azione per la Droga non amministra alcuna forma di terapia medica per i suoi pazienti.

The 'voice of wrestling' - Frank Bevilacqua

by Romaina Morgenella

Any wrestling fan who attends this exciting sport often is almost certain to recognize this man. His voice is as discernable as the championship wrestling belt. He is the 'voice of wrestling.' Frank "Cookie" Bevilacqua.

Born in Boston's North End, he has been a part of the wrestling world for 25 years. His job takes him to many arenas in Massachusetts and up along the Main area, he mostly announces in North Attleboro, Lowell, Lawrence, Pittsburg and Springfield, Massachusetts, and up in Bangor and Waterville, Maine, just to name a few. He can tell you more about this business than just about anyone. To know this man as an announcer and a friend is to know the same man, pleasant in every way.

Frank said, "Wrestling is the greatest sport in the world, also the oldest, and I'm proud to be a part of this world."

Frank Bevilacqua's job is almost as tough as being a wrestler, when the wrestling gets out of control as it so often does, Frank may wind up with the wrestlers on his announcers table or on him, or he gets his microphone taken away from him and finds that one of the wrestlers will be hitting his opponent with it. Sometimes he is even minus the chair he is sitting on and this becomes almost a common occurrence to him.

His life has been full and exciting in this business and he would not have it any other way. So the next time you say "hi!" to this charming man, he will tell you about his life in this great sport, and you will enjoy listening to and knowing him, the announcer everyone likes ...

Frank keeps order

His voice is also utilized when he orders the fans to stop throwing things into the ring. Do the fans obey him? Most of the time they do.

I asked him who some of his favorite wrestlers were, he mentioned the following: Killer Kowalski, George Steele, Bruno Sammartino, Mario Miano, Tony Marino, Professor Tanaka, Victor Rivera, Pete Sanchez, and the late Frank Scarpa of East Boston. He said, "I am very impressed with the New World Champion Pedro Morales. He is a fine person and a truly great champion."

To Frank, the best champion the wrestling world has ever seen is Bruno Sammartino. Said Frank, "The only other wrestler that has such appeal instantaneously with the fans is Pedro Morales, he and Bruno are somewhat alike in this way."

L’Arcidiocesi propone un piano di consolidamento delle scuole

L’Ufficio Progetti per gli Affari Urbani dell’Arcidiocesi di Boston ha preso in considerazione la questione del consolidamento delle scuole parrocchiali dell’East Boston.

Fr. Michael Groden del "Planning Office" ha informato un gruppo di genitori riuniti nella scuola di Mt. Carmel che è possibile la chiusura di una scuola per non farne di quelle che abbiano la forza di volonta e determinazione di aperto ogni lunedì, mercoledì, venerdì e sabato dalle 9 alle 5.

In base all’Ufficio Progetti questo consolidamento consiste nell’uso comune e scambio di insegnanti, di idee e dei nuovi corsi e non necessariamente l’intersezione fisica delle scuole.

Costituita la “East Boston Collaborative” durante lo scorso anno un nuovo gruppo denominato "The East Boston Collaborative" è stato formato dal “Planning Office” per analizzare il consolidamento delle scuole ed altri futuri progetti. Il gruppo consiste di Parroci, Superiori Provinciali, Presidi ed insegnanti di tutte le scuole parrocchiali di East Boston.

Fr. Groden ha affermato che i Superiori Provinciali farebbero del loro meglio per assicurare insegnanti a queste scuole e che il Planning Office si impegnerebbe a cercare i fondi necessari per assicurare un avvenire brillante alle scuole parrocchiali di East Boston.

Ai genitori la decisione finale. Fr. Groden ha dichiarato che in base a quanto Suo Ecc. l’Arcivescovo medesimo ha sottolineato, la decisione finale circa il consolidamento delle scuole dovrà essere presa dai genitori.

L’incontro del Parent Teachers Guild presso la chiesa di Mt. Carmel è stato formato da una serie di incontri tra Fr. Groden e i genitori di East Boston.

Fr. Groden ha promesso che gli studenti che attendono le scuole di L’ARCIDIACesi (cont. p. 10).

Il Consiglio di Azione per la Droga apre un centro nella comunità

Il "Drug Action Council" ha aperto un nuovo centro nella comunità da adibirsi a molteplici usi. Sebbene molti dei programmi abbiano a che fare con l’eroduzione della droga e la riabilitazione, altri invece servono la comunità in generale. Questo centro infatti non è adibito solamente per coloro che usano stupefacenti.

Il personale addetto a questo centro raccomanda che coloro che usano la droga siano genuinamente interessati ad apprendere circa le ripercussioni e le conseguenze dannose degli stupefacenti e che abbiano la forza di volontà e determinazione di non farne più uso.

Questo centro che si trova al 177 Maverick Street in East Boston è aperto ogni lunedì, mercoledì, venerdì e sabato dalle 9 alle 5 ed ogni martedì e giovedì dalle 9 alle 10 di sera. Il telefono è 569-5390 o 569-5391.

Questo centro ha ricevuto fondi per l’ammontare di 27 mila dollari da parte del "Department of Mental Health" per un periodo di cinque mesi e potrà ricevere ulteriori fondi se tale programma avrà successo.

Questo Consiglio di Azione per la Droga che ebbe inizio con delle riunioni settimanali presso la "Sacred Heart Hall," è ormai diventato un centro adibito a vari usi come centro informativo e di riabilitazione per coloro che sono affetti dal vizio degli stupefacenti.

Numerosi programmi sono stati iniziati con lo scopo di raggiungere ogni individuo nella comunità, sia esso un adolescente, o un genitore preoccupato in riguardo alla droga, o un individuo che non vuole più farne uso.

East Boston ha una squadra di calcio
by Rosario Cascio
La East Boston Soccer Club annuncia la riapertura della stagione calcistica.

La prima partita amichevole svoltasi domenica scorso, contro la Medford Italia, si è conclusa in parità 4-4.

Benché il campo sia stato impraticabile per il lungo inverno, la si è svolta con spunti emozionanti anche se la squadra non era all'altezza del suo rendimento a causa della corta preparazione.

Le reti per l'Eastie sono state realizzate al primo tempo da Carlo Cuttillo, su azione personale, e alla seconda da Joe Vasques su punizione.

Nei secondi tempo la terza veniva segnata da George Lo Grasso su passaggio di Vasques, e la quarta veniva segnata dallo stesso Vasques su rigore.

La nostra squadra avrà un articolo su questo giornale ogni settimana, perché che siate o no amanti del calcio leggete e diffondete questo giornale.

la MPA considera casa in Revere e Winthrop

Due settimane fa la Commissione dei Direttori del Port Authority ha considerato di comprare case in Revere e Winthrop. Alla riunione della Commissione erano presenti più di 60 persone. La Commissione è d’accordo che in due settimane si dovrà conoscere la decisione di queste comprare. Parecchi membri della Commissione hanno discusso sulla legalità di comprare queste case e alla prossima riunione è stata chiesta un'opinione legale a riguardo.

La Commissione sta considerando una raccomandazione del direttore del MPA, Edward J. King, di comprare case per alleviare la gente in quelle aree più rumorose. La MPA sta attualmente comprando case per questo scopo in East Boston.

Sebbene molti dei presenti pregano la Commissione di comprare le loro case, tuttavia molti della Commissione includo lo State Rep. Ralph Siriani, criticarono fortemente la MPA nel voler comprare le sopradette case.
